The New Liberal Family Pack

"We can strengthen families – without raising your taxes – if we stop corporate give-aways, control wasteful spending like $30-billion fighter jets, and focus on what really matters: giving every Canadian the tools to succeed in the years ahead." - Michael Ignatieff

1 Learning Passport

- $1,000 a year over four years $4,000 in total into an RESP for every high school student to use when they go to college or university.
- For students in low income families, the amount will be $1,500 a year, or an extra $6,000 in total.

2 Early Childhood Learning and Care

- To give our kids the best start while giving parents access to affordable, quality child care, a Liberal government will create a new Early Childhood Learning and Care Fund.
- This fund will help create new child care spaces across Canada, with affordable fees, and qualified, professional staff.

3 Family Care

- A new Family Care Employment Insurance Benefit, similar to EI parental leave, to let you take six months off work to care for a gravely ill family member at home.
- A new Family Care Tax Benefit up to $1,350 annually, modeled on the Child Tax Benefit, to help low-and middle-income families manage costs.

4 Stronger Public Pensions

- Work with the provinces and territories to gradually expand the Canada Pension Plan (CPP), the most reliable, simple and low-cost way to save.
- A new Secure Retirement Option, which is a voluntary supplement that will let you top up your CPP. The SRO will make it easy to save for your retirement without the risk, costs and complexity of the stock market or RRSP's.
- Help low-income seniors with a $700 million boost to the Guaranteed Income Supplement (GIS).

5 Green Renovation Tax Credit

- A Liberal government will implement a Green Renovation Tax Credit of up to $13,500.
- This fund will help families with the up-front costs of energy-saving home renovations such as installing energy-efficient windows, improving insulation, replacing old appliances, and upgrading roofing.

Crash kills local man

► Transportation Safety Board now investigating Saskatoon plane crash ► Fearing fire, bystanders rescued pilots from wreckage

An Ottawa area man has died in a plane crash in Saskatoon while a second local man, a pilot, has escaped with injuries.

Iaroslav Gorokhovski, 47, of Embrun, Ont., was killed when the Spanish-built Casa 212 aircraft he was a passenger in suffered an engine failure and crashed onto a busy Saskatoon road Friday.

"It's quite devastating for everybody," said Terry McConnell of Fugro Airborne Surveys, the company that operated the downed aircraft. He said Gorokhovski, who was in charge of operating geological survey sensors on board the aircraft, had been at Fugro since 1998.

The company employs about 70 people in Ottawa, McConnell said, adding the company has put all of its airplanes on standby to allow employees time to come to terms with the crash.

Citing privacy concerns, McConnell would not confirm reports that Gorokhovski is survived by a wife and two sons.

McConnell said the airplane had been conducting geological survey work, usually done at an altitude of about 120 metres, near Saskatoon on Friday when the pilots reported that one of their engines had failed.

McConnell said the plane began climbing, the pilots declared an emergency and were on the final approach for a landing at Saskatoon's airport when the plane slammed into a brick wall that separates a four-lane roadway from nearby homes.

The two pilots, Brock Gorrell of Mallorytown and Cameron Sutcliffe of Calgary have been released from hospital.

Transportation Safety Board spokesman John Cottreau said investigators would be collecting information, as well as relevant pieces of the plane, over the next few days before bringing them back to the board's regional office in Winnipeg for closer examination.

Cottreau said it was too early to say what engine problems the plane might have suffered.

Eyewitnesses said the pilot appeared to be trying to avoid hitting either the nearby houses or the busy grocery store.

► 13-year-old comes out on top at Ottawa Regional Science Fair with hockey helmet prototype

 JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

After suffering a concussion six months ago that left him out of school for a week and off the ice for two, Daniel McInnis dug a little deeper into hockey helmet design.

Now the Grade 8 student will take his helmet prototype to the Canada-Wide Science Fair next month after winning best in fair at the regional competition on Saturday.

"Helmets today, they don't follow basic physics principles. The thicker foam you have, the less of a g-force," said McInnis, who believes his design with more foam would translate into fewer concussions.

He tested six different well-known brands of hockey helmets against a prototype he built himself. After dropping them at varying heights, he noticed some interesting results.

"My helmet averaged about 2.3 times better out of all the heights dropped," he said.

On May 14, he will travel to Toronto to compete in the national competition with 10 other regional finalists.

Science rules

The 50th annual Ottawa Regional Science Fair saw 250 science projects. Among the winners:

- Sandro Young, Lisgar Collegiate Institute, "Avatouch 2.0: 'Upgrading' Real Life with a Rich Augmented Reality Experience."

Liberals' style stands out at platform launch

NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Michael Ignatieff speaks without notes to emphasize realness ► Platform elements focus on family

Never mind the substance, check out the style.

The Liberal campaign platform launch yesterday wasn't just an opportunity for the party to tout its "family pack" policy agenda paid for by billions in business tax hikes.

The online launch of the 94-page document was designed as a study in contrasts between Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff and Prime Minister Stephen Harper as Canadian voters consider their ballot choices for May 2.

"This is what democracy looks like," said Ignatieff, speaking without notes or TelePrompTer in a hotel ballroom ringed with seated supporters like an amphitheatre.

"This is the right way to do it, folks. This is the only way to do it in a democracy. You put ideas out, you defend them clearly, and then you stand and answer questions in front of the Canadian people."

The launch format included video addresses from Liberal candidates — all women — touting four family-friendly platform elements: Pension reforms, post-secondary education, home care, and early childhood education.

"The other guys are a one-man band," Ignatieff said of Harper. "I've got a team."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Red Book launch

The detailed Liberal platform release comes unusually early in the 36-day campaign.

► It mirrors the Liberal launch of their 1993 campaign "Red Book" that was also delivered in a budget-style media lock-up at a downtown Ottawa hotel — designed to lend an air of credibility to a policy blueprint.

► This time, the document also went out online, something Michael Ignatieff said made "a little bit of history."

Harper rocks out to AC/DC with karate kids

Stephen Harper started the second week of his federal election campaign in his personal comfort zone: Listening to some AC/DC and playing a little hockey.

He stayed in his policy comfort zone as well.

Harper announced that, if elected, the Tories would double the existing tax credit for children's sports to $1,000 and introduce a $500 credit for adults.

But neither will come into force until the budget is balanced — or not until 2015-16, according to Tory estimates.

"A re-elected Conservative government will enact both of these measures before the end of our next mandate, because our approach is clear — when we can afford it, we will lower your taxes," Harper told a campaign event yesterday at an Ottawa gym.

Initially, Conservative officials had said the children's tax credit would go into effect immediately, but they later changed their tune, citing an error in the campaign literature.

An expert panel will decide which activities qualify for the credit, Harper said as a group of young martial artists kicked and punched the air behind him.

The kids' program is slated to cost the treasury about $145 million a year, while the adult program carries an annual price tag of $275 million.

Harper arrived at the gym to the sounds of Thunderstruck by AC/DC, a band he counts among his favourites.

He and his wife, Laureen, watched children practise karate moves before each picked up a red padded shield to give the kids a live-liner target.

Said Harper to one waifish child as he absorbed the blows: "Put more into it."

NDP pans 'Red Books'

Jack Layton brushed off both the Liberal platform release and claims that one of his Quebec candidates flirted with separatists yesterday as the NDP campaign continued trying to find its footing.

Without having read the Liberal program, Layton dismissed it as hollow, suggesting the promises in the party's "Red Books" over the years "were broken in record numbers."

Bloc Québécois Leader Gilles Duceppe has joined a growing chorus of critics calling for a closer look into the safety of asbestos mining.

Protests spread over pastor's Qur'an burning

Violence reaches Afghanistan's east Sparked by the burning of Islamic holy book by Florida church

Demonstrators battled police in southern Afghanistan's main city yesterday and took to the streets in the turbulent east for the first time as western pleas failed to halt a third day of rage over a Florida pastor's burning of the Qur'an.

An officer was shot dead in a second day of clashes in the city of Kandahar, said provincial health director Qayum Pokhla. Two officers and 18 civilians were wounded, he said.

In Jalalabad, the largest city in the east, hundreds of people blocked the main highway for three hours, shouting for U.S. troops to leave, burning an effigy of President Barack Obama and stomping on a drawing of a U.S. flag.

The violence was set off by anger over the March 20 burning of the Qur'an by a Florida church — the same church whose pastor had threatened to do so last year on the anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks, triggering worldwide outrage.

The protests, which began Friday, also appear to be fuelled more broadly by the resentment that has been building for years in Afghanistan over the operations of western military forces, blamed for killing and mistreating civilians.

Engineers aim to stop leak

Engineers pinned their hopes on chemicals, sawdust and shredded newspaper to stop highly radioactive water pouring into the ocean from Japan's tsunami-ravaged nuclear plant yesterday, as officials said it will take several months to bring the crisis under control, the first time they have provided a timetable. Concrete already failed to stop the tainted water spewing from a crack in a maintenance pit, and the new mixture did not appear to be working either, but engineers said they were not abandoning it.

The Fukushima Daichi plant has been leaking radioactivity since the March 11 tsunami carved a path of destruction along Japan's northeastern coast, killing as many as 25,000 people and knocking out key cooling systems.

Tax deal is bitter tweet

A proposed tax break for one of the world's hottest social media companies has sparked a storm of twittering in San Francisco. As an incentive for moving its headquarters to a blighted inner-city block, Twitter has asked for an exemption from San Francisco's payroll tax on new hires. This could mean big savings as the company expands from hundreds to thousands of employees. But politicians and the city's largest public-employee union call the proposal a poorly crafted gift to the rich. And low-income residents worry that revitalization will just lead to higher rents.

Air Canada in talks to avert strike

Air Canada's 3,800 customer-service and sales agents could strike on June 13 unless mediated talks result in an agreement. Local 2002 of the Canadian Auto Workers says the talks are intended to reach a settlement, but bargaining is a challenge because workers face concession demands on several issues including pensions. Air Canada sees these demands as productivity improvements.

Meanwhile, the Canadian dollar could see further increases at the end of the week when traders see the latest employment report.

Porter said it's expected that Statistics Canada will report another month of strong gains.

Interest rates will also focus traders' attention this week, as the European Central Bank makes an announcement on interest rates on Thursday. It's widely expected that inflation that has been exceeding ECB targets will lead the bank to start raising its key rate.

No appy ending for iPad news aggregator

When it launched on March 8, it won lavish praise from some of the web's leading tech blogs, got 120,000 downloads in its first week and vaulted to the top of the free section of Apple's App Store.

Zite, which bills itself as "a personalized iPad magazine that gets smarter as you use it," collects and presents news from around the web in a streamlined reader-friendly format. It edits the content based on a user's Twitter account, RSS feeds and feedback they provide as they read articles.

But it quickly got the attention of news organizations as well as users. On Wednesday, the Vancouver-based team behind Zite received a cease-and-desist letter co-signed by a list of heavyweights including The Associated Press, Dow Jones, Gannett Co., Inc., Getty Images, the National Geographic Society and Time Inc., claiming the app was "plainly unlawful" and

"misappropriating" intellectual property.

Not surprisingly, publishers weren't pleased that ads attached to their stories were being hidden from view, depriving the websites of advertising revenue.

Zite founder and CEO Ali Davar said he was expecting a lawyer's letter and would comply with the order.

"We had a few publishers contact us by email initially so we thought they would have this kind of reaction," he said.

Part of the appeal for publishers is that Zite helps readers discover content they would not otherwise have found themselves, he added. THE CANADIAN PRESS

CTV programs coming to more screens

CTV will make more of its programming available on smartphones and tablets, says the president of the newly created Bell Media division. Kevin Crull said Friday that he doesn't want to tinker with the CTV brand, just make it more available.

Parent company BCE Inc. announced the new Bell division after it closed the $1.2-billion deal to buy the rest of the CTV assets that it didn't already own.

The Montreal telecommunications company wants to reach more viewers by making programs available on computers, tablets and smartphones.

Crull said some of CTV's 29 specialty channels may be in for a change, but added that he doesn't expect job cuts.

Crull also said his division may look to make acquisitions.

By 2015, Bell expects to have more than 15-million customers using either its TVs, computers, tablets or smartphones to watch shows.

DON'T LET L-BOMB DASH YOUR VOTE

Federal politics is a key local industry in Ottawa, so when election campaigns take the politicos on the road, it can get unusually quiet here.

There are probably local benefits, the traffic relief of three dozen or so ministerial limos taken off the road, for example, but the nation's capital fades into the background once Parliament is shuttered and the leaders start touring. The Conservative, NDP and Liberal leaders all happened to be in town yesterday, but Ottawa is just another campaign stop now.

It didn't take long for the discourse to get unparliamentary out there. Right out of the gate, Bloc Québécois Leader Gilles Duceppe accused the Tories' Stephen Harper of lying, an accusation that is not tolerated back here inside the House of Commons.

There are good reasons the word "liar" is a no-go in our legislatures. There isn't much left of a debate, after all, once the L-bomb has been dropped. It's been cynically said of lying in Parliament that it's OK to do it, but bad form to say it. (This isn't entirely accurate, as the question of whether International Co-operation Minister Bev Oda had, in a more genteel phrasing, "misled the House" briefly threatened to bring down the government.)

The partisan fervour spread to Queen's Park last week, where MPPs are also in election mode. Local provincial Tory Lisa MacLeod went Duceppe one better during Finance Minister Dwight Duncan's budget speech, which he used as an opportunity to insert numerous digs at her party. She called him a liar in the legislature and when she refused to retract it, she was kicked out of the chamber for a time out.

Afterward, MacLeod was unapologetic and perhaps a little over-fond of the proscribed word, telling me, "I called him a liar, and I had an opportunity to withdraw. I took a deep breath and I thought, 'He lied, so therefore he's a liar.'"

Mercifully, amid this crucial national debate on who is the lying-est liar ever, no party will be able to entirely avoid unveiling its actual policies sometime over the course of this campaign.

Don't let nasty political sideshows or plain old ballot fatigue (municipal election last fall, federal next month, provincial this coming fall) turn you off voting. Remember, while the rest of the country sends its MPs away to Ottawa, potentially out of town for months at a time, ours stay right here with us. Choose carefully.

Letters

GATINEAU, Que. By voting or not, young Canadians will decide May 2 whether our country will move towards greater assistance to banks and large corporations or towards a growing economy based on wealth sharing and Canadians' well-being.

An analysis of EKOS polling between July 7 and Sept. 28 of last year suggested Canadians between the ages of 18 and 24 would elect a Liberal minority government, with a substantial increase in representation for the New Democrats, Bloc Québécois, and Greens. The Conservative party would be severely reduced, virtually wiped out in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Unfortunately, only 37 per cent of eligible voters between the ages of 18 and 24 exercised their democratic duty during the 2008 federal election. Let's hope these facts will catch young voters' attention and bring them to the ballots May 2. More than ever, the future of a Canada for all Canadians is in young Canadian voters' hands.

Pillows and feathers fly across the globe

People in cities across the globe took part in mass pillow fights as part of International Pillow Fight Day. Pillow fights were held in a number of Canadian cities, including Calgary, Vancouver, Montreal, Toronto and London.

In Vancouver, the flash mob was organized on Facebook and several hundred people showed up with pillows and proceeded to knock the stuffing out of them in a frenzied fight outside the Vancouver Art Gallery.

In London's Trafalgar Square, people came decked out in pyjamas, dressing gowns and fancy dress to take part in the good-natured pillow fight Saturday afternoon. Most people carried feather-filled pillows that exploded as they fought.

London's Metropolitan Police said yesterday the event had been peaceful and they had no reports of any trouble.

Organizers listed similar events in more than 130 cities around the world. The fights were organized by The Urban Playground Movement, which wants to encourage people to make use of public spaces.

Kids pick their favourites

Johnny Depp showed his appreciation for his Kids' Choice Award with a slimming.

After earning the blimp-shaped favourite movie actor trophy for his Mad Hatter role in Alice in Wonderland, Depp manned a hose and unleashed waves of green goop on the screaming crowd of more than 10,000 kids — and a few adults.

"You guys are the future," he said Saturday before spraying the slime inside University of Southern California's Galen Center. "Take good care of us."

The screaming mob at Nickelodeon's 24th annual fan-favourite ceremony later revolted by flicking the goo at Modern Family co-star Rico Rodriguez and Arthur leading man Russell Brand.

Jack Black, the zany master of ceremonies, kicked off the silly show by arriving in a monster truck, performing a flash mob-style routine on the orange carpet.

- ▶ Former sitcom star's opening night does not go over well with fans
- ▶ Torpedo of Truth tour greeted with boos and calls for it to be ended

► Charlie Sheen performs at the Fox Theatre in Detroit, Saturday. He came out with his "goddesses" holding "War" and "Lock" signs.

Charlie Sheen bombs in tour opener

Charlie Sheen and his "goddesses" took the stage to thunderous applause Saturday night for the first leg of his Torpedo of Truth tour. The 70-minute show hadn't even ended when the first reviews were in, and they were brutal.

The former Two and a Half Men star showed that comedic success on the screen doesn't necessarily translate to the stage, and the capacity crowd at Detroit's 5,100-seat Fox Theatre rebelled before the show ended, chanting "refund!" and walking out in droves.

Linda Fugate, 47, of the Detroit suburb of Lincoln Park, left the theatre and walked up the street yelling, "I want my money back!"

She said she paid $150 for two seats.

"I was hoping for something. I didn't think it would be this bad."

Sheen's publicist Larry Solters declined to comment after the show, but Sheen reappeared after the house lights went up to thank those who remained.

Fans who arrived at the theatre — some who had to fly in for the show — said they were hoping to see the increasingly eccentric actor deliver some of the colourful rants that have made him an Internet star since his ugly falling out with CBS and the producers of Two and a Half Men.

They got the ranting. It just wasn't funny.

"I expected him to at least entertain a little bit. It was just a bunch of ranting," said Rodney Gagnon, 34, of Windsor, Ont.

On Twitter, where Sheen has amassed some 3.4 million followers, some fans were already predicting a premature end for the planned 20-city tour, which was scheduled to resume last night in Chicago.

"Charlie Sheen thanks for saying goodbye! Piece of advice cancel the rest of your tour," someone tweeted under the name ChrstosMo.

The show started well for the 45-year-old Sheen, with the audience standing and cheering as he and the women he calls his "goddesses" took the stage. The women, a former porn star and an actress who live with him, carried placards with the words "War" and "Lock," a reference to Sheen's recent description of himself as a warlock.

"I don't see a single empty seat," he said. Not long into the show, though, an audience member booted, prompting Sheen to sanguinely reply, "I've already got your money, dude."

Director Joe Wright, who made a name for himself with Pride and Prejudice and Atonement, takes quite the departure with his latest, Hanna, about a 16-year-old trained assassin (Saoirse Ronan) on the run across Europe, pursued by a calculating CIA agent (Cate Blanchett). Surprisingly, Wright saw the action thriller as a chance to get in touch with his own childhood.

He spoke with Metro about his parents' puppet theatre, creepy Cold War-era amusement parks and the necessity of flashy single-shot action sequences.

Much like the four-minute-long Dunkirk sequence in Atonement, you have an impressive action sequence in the Berlin subway that's done in a single shot.

Both of them were done out of necessity. A sequence like this one would normally require maybe 40 different shots, and as I only ever manage about 14 a day, and as we only had one day to shoot this sequence, I kind of was up against the wall.

Most action movie fight scenes now are edited so tightly, it's hard to see anything.

I'm a big fan of Paul Greengrass's work on the Jason Bourne films, but I do feel like they've been imitated probably by lesser directors since, and I didn't want to fall into that category. I wanted to do something that didn't succumb to the temptation of hiding the action in a barrage of edits.

The film climaxes in a rather creepy, old amusement park. Where did that come from?

I think my sister used to go to some illegal raves there in the early '90s. And so she told me about it, and it was just an amazing find, really. It really spoke to the themes and the imagery of fairy tales that I was trying to unearth. It was pretty much how we found it.

You tend to re-team with a lot of the same actors and crew members on your films.

I was brought up in a puppet theatre, so I've always kind of aspired to that kind of company feeling, really. We'd go on tour every summer with the puppets and make these great journeys across Europe in a couple of old Ford vans. So that's kind of what I'm trying to recreate with my filmmaking family. It creates quite a safe environment — safe in a good way — that enables us to be creative without looking over our shoulders. And I find that I can be silly and myself and accepted.

► Rehab worker, Lohan heard screaming and hurling insults on 911 call from clinic ► Prosecutors found insufficient evidence to file any charges

The yelling- and expletive-filled 911 call from the night of Lindsay Lohan's infamous Betty Ford Center brawl has been released, according to Radar Online.

During the call, both Lohan and clinic worker Dawn Holland can be heard complaining to the operator, yelling at each other and struggling over the phone.

"Lindsay Lohan is being rude. She's gotten on the phone with her mom and she's telling her mom I'm being rude to her, which I'm not," Holland says in the recording. ● METRO

"Kelly and me get along great, but it's gross. I don't like being the punchline for drugs when I don't do them, so stop it."

Regardless of how well they get along, Love didn't mind turning the tables on Osbourne, saying, "This girl I know, Kelly Osbourne, I've saved her life twice. I've done CPR, I've put things in her boobs. [She was on] Oxycontin, cocaine, foaming at the mouth."

The Britney factor

► Britney Spears' new album, Femme Fatale, debuted last week ► Author Peggy Orenstein examines the long-lasting — and damaging — effects of the 'girl power' pop star's sexuality

GETTY IMAGES

SAM D'AMATO
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LONDON

In your new book Cinderella Ate My Daughter, you write about how Disney princess culture has altered your little girl's view of sexuality. It reminded me of Britney Spears, when she debuted in a schoolgirl outfit posing suggestively.

Yes, she set a template for a lot of the confusion that came after and was ironically a direct outgrowth of the Girl Power movement — she had an impact on the way Girl Power was commodified and changed. On the one hand, she was a breakthrough because she was a girl who was a star for girls, as opposed to, say, David Cassidy or Bobby Sherman or the Jonas Brothers today. But as such, she had this whole different approach. She was at once selling chastity and sex and combining them in this really weird way.

And she was doing this for really little girls, when she started.

It's hard to remember now, but one of her central fan bases was six-year-old girls, who would go to her concerts and scream and shout. She always talked about being a virgin. And she'd say, "If you see me as a Lolita, that's your problem." But everything she did completely contradicted that. It's this weird thing where she was sexualizing innocence and fetishizing it. So it was an ultimately incredibly disempowering stance for girls to see.

And what's been the fallout all these years later?

The culture has taken up that message. It plays into the diva culture of little girls right now, that accelerated makeup and hot dance moves, with Miley Cyrus and the like. I want to be clear: I don't come at this from a perspective to be negative about sexuality. It's just that when little girls have inappropriate sexuality — however it's imposed, by pop culture or adults they love — they don't understand it. The risk is that they never connect it and sexiness becomes a performance for them rather than something that involves intimacy. Instead they see sexiness as something they do for the pleasure and entertainment for others. As if self-objectification was a rite of passage.

"She was selling chastity and sex and combining them in this weird way."
AUTHOR PEGGY ORENSTEIN

You see that today: Young girls "sex" naked photos of themselves to their boyfriends.

With sexting, there's also an issue of sexual entitlement. Girls are feeling like they have to perform the idea that they're comfortable with their sexuality. And you have to wonder, what is it that they're getting? They don't have pleasure or control. What is the reality of what that act gives them? It's not anything healthy.

So what are parents supposed to do?

First, it's about limiting their access to media and such, when they're really little. And also trying to expand their ideas of who they are and what they can be, that's not linked constantly to playing at pretty or sassy (which is sexy with training wheels). Educate them and yourself.

Who is your daughter Daisy idolizing these days?

Well, this is going to sound politically correct but it's true. We went to a dinner the other night where this 99-year-old judo champion was being honoured. She was talking about, among other things, how one should be gentle, strong and beautiful. To illustrate "gentle" and "strong," she said she could walk up to a man twice her size (which wouldn't be hard, she was about four-foot-nine) and touch him with her index finger and he would collapse. And by beautiful, she meant not the externals but a beautiful heart. I told Daisy, "Look at her, isn't she amazing!" She was taken. She was into it.

 Cooking pork chops with the bone in offers up a juicy and flavourful dish.

And, with just a few other pantry staples, dinner is ready. These pork chops are go perfectly served with rice or mashed potatoes and your favourite vegetables.

Preparation:

1 Place pork chops on plate and sprinkle both sides with sage, thyme, salt and pepper. Dredge each pork chop in flour to coat, shake off excess.

2 In large nonstick skillet heat oil over medium high heat and brown pork chops on both sides. Remove to plate and keep warm. Return skillet to medium heat and cook onion for 5 minutes or until softened. Add apples and thyme and cook for 2 minutes. Add cider and raisins and bring to boil. Return pork chops to skillet and turn to coat. Simmer for about 5 minutes or until hint of pink remains inside. Sprinkle with parsley before serving.

Ingredients:

- 4 bone in pork loin chops
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) each dried sage and thyme leaves
- 1/2 tsp (2 mL) each salt and pepper
- 3 tbsp (45 mL) all purpose flour
- 2 tbsp (25 mL) extra virgin olive oil

- 1 onion, thinly sliced
- 2 apples (such as Empire or Cortland), cored and thinly sliced
- 1 1/2 cups (375 mL) apple cider
- 1/4 cup (50 mL) raisins
- 2 tbsp (25 mL) chopped fresh Italian parsley

Ingredients:

Garb and Herb Infused Oil

- 1/2 cup Mazola RightBlend (canola and extra virgin olive oil blend)
- 2 tablespoons fresh herbs (rosemary, oregano, thyme, sage, chives, basil), minced
- 2 tablespoons minced, fresh Italian parsley
- 2 cloves fresh garlic, minced
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Dough

- 4 – 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 packages Fleischmann's Quick-Rise yeast
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 – 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 – 1/3 cups very warm milk (120° – 130°F/50° – 55°C)
- 1 egg, lightly beaten
- 1/4 cup Mazola RightBlend (canola and extra virgin olive oil blend)

Preparation:

1 Combine oil, herbs, garlic and salt in small bowl and set aside.

2 Dough: Combine flour, undissolved yeast, sugar and salt in bowl. Heat. Add milk to flour mixture and mix on low speed for 1 minute.

Stir in egg and oil and continue to mix on low until well blended.

3 Transfer dough to floured surface and knead until smooth and elastic, 6 minutes. Shape dough into ball, and transfer to oiled bowl; turning once to coat. Cover; let rise in warm, draft-free place until doubled in size, about 45 minutes.

4 Punch dough down and spread onto a lightly floured surface. Using hands, pat dough into a 25x30 cm rectangle, approximately 3 cm thick. Divide dough into about 30 pieces using knife; roll into balls. Dip dough balls into oil and herb mixture to lightly coat. Arrange coated dough balls evenly in bottom of greased 25 cm tube pan. Cover; let rise in warm, draft-free place until doubled in size, about 30 minutes.

5 Bake at 350°F/180°C for 25 to 30 minutes. Let cool in pan on rack for 10 minutes. Invert to move from pan and serve. NEWS CANADA

A moment of entrepreneurial inspiration can strike anywhere. For Alex

Stuart, it was while looking out the window of his condominium at the roofs of the Winnipeg skyline.

"Look at all that unused real estate," Alex thought to himself, as he came up with an idea to harness its space and energy.

"I started researching wind turbines and came across the vertical axis design. I fell in love the simplicity of the model."

Stuart and his partner Justin Phillips at Global Wind Group are now marketing their technology to India, several countries in the Caribbean and Canada's Northern Territories

Business advice

Stuart's tips for new entrepreneurs.

- 2 Find qualified mentors
- 3 Seek investment well before you run out of money
- 4 Be prepared for bankruptcy
- 5 Keep your eye on your cash flow where electricity is expensive and difficult to maintain.

It also hasn't been plagued with the problems facing the large scale turbines because of its compact, vertical design and minimal noise.

"Some entrepreneurs will sell at this stage, recoup the money and go on. We're really motivated to keep this going and stay in the business."

Are you thinking about starting your own business but are in need of some inspiration?

Follow Alex Stuart's lead. Sometimes all it takes is opening your eyes and looking out the window.

BOOK REVIEW

CRAIG LUND

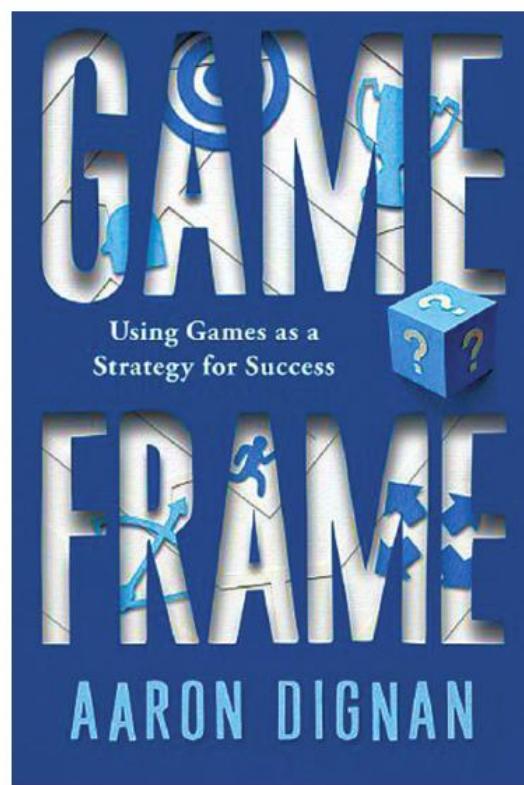

WORK@METRONEWS.CA

Most would agree, if we were more stimulated and challenged by our work, our contentment and job satisfaction would be in a warm fuzzy place.

Aaron Dignan, author of Game Frame, suggests that the medium of "gaming" is designed to address these issues systemically alluding to the infamous line by Mary Poppins: "You see, in every job that must be done, there is an element of fun. You find the fun, and snap! The job's a game."

Dignan points out the two distinct symptoms of this boredom.

A lack of Volition or "the will to do something: the motivational and internal drive to see it through" and Lack of Faculty which is "the belief that we have the skills and tools to handle the challenges we're facing."

The typical approach managers take to dealing with these two issues is by providing an incentive or reward... and if that is not successful plan B is to threaten said employee. Neither approach has long term success.

Tackling a lack of volition or faculty with blunt instruments like rewards or punishments simply ignores the fact that the activities and experiences causing these symptoms aren't any fun."

The good news is that we are learning machines and thrive most when we experience that feeling of learning something new in fact our brain even rewards us with a hit of opioids "natures pleasure drug" which is what creates that "feeling."

Dignan's insights into the power of play and gamification of work provide compelling insight into not just why we need to change our systems from the inside out... but how.

This is a book for the frustrated manager and avid gamer.

Success in diversity

Providers of diversity training almost uniformly report that fear of litigation is the primary reason companies contact them. But since the mid-2000s, there has been a small-but-growing shift in thinking among corporate managers: More diversity in the workplace — in experience, race and sexual orientation — makes for a more competitive business.

This movement was expressed in the 2008 book The Difference, by University of Michigan professor Scott E. Page. In it, Page used mathematical analysis to show a relationship between greater diversity and group achievement.

"If you have a homogeneous group of people with the same background, it's harder for them to solve a problem," says Nick Witenberg of Optimism Matters, a diversity trainer based in Atlanta. "Racial, generational and cultural diversity brings different schools of thought to the table, so they can come up with an idea more quickly." METRO

STUDENT VOICES

ROBERT KANIA
TALENTEGG.CA

It was March of 2005, and I was on the verge of finishing an undergraduate degree in English at Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario.

I was also working full-time in a managerial capacity at a bar and nightclub on campus. I generally don't take on a job or project unless I'm prepared to pour my heart and soul into it.

I was lucky to be aligned with others that operated the same way, in my role as manager of food operations at the Queen's Pub and Alfie's Pub on campus. Our team was able to achieve exceptional results, and we ultimately went on to turn around two struggling campus operations.

► Robert Kania is the founder of AllergyTrails.com, the world's leading food allergy review community.

One night in the spring of 2005, after months of hard work, I received an unexpected voice mail message from the food service rep that I dealt with when ordering food and supplies. This individual worked for SYSCO Food Services and he mentioned that his company was interested in hiring a bright, ambitious grad.

If I was interested in working with their company upon graduation, I should apply, and he would provide me with a stellar reference.

That voice mail message ultimately led me to apply for a position in sales and marketing for SYSCO Food Services. I was accepted for the role and I moved from my hometown of Toronto to beautiful Victoria, B.C., where I spent the next five years living, working, and enjoying all that the west coast of Canada has to offer.

If you're a student, the bottom line is this: That summer job you have, or that part-time position you're working in while you're in school, can lead to much bigger and better things. If you do an excellent job with what you've got to work with, people will notice and job offers might just come your way out of the blue.

But the key is, you need to do an outstanding job, even when you think no one is watching. It all starts with the right attitude and you need to recognize opportunities when they come your way.

Where Robert is now
After working with SYSCO for two years on the west coast, I started my own venture distributing natural health products. In 2008, I decided to return to school for an MBA at the University of Victoria.

Upon completion of the MBA in 2010, I founded AllergyTrails.com — the

Canadians start off at top of heap

► Winnipeg rink's three games on weekend drew near-capacity crowds at Regina's Brandt Centre

Canada's Jeff Stoughton picked up his third straight win to open the Ford Men's World Curling Championship yesterday despite German skip Andy Kapp's one-man show.

Stoughton's Winnipeg team shot 90 per cent to Germany's 71 in a 7-4 victory, but Kapp compensated for his teammates' mistakes with some pressure shots to keep the game close.

"We have to give credit to Andy Kapp because that could have been a blowout for sure," said Stoughton third Jon Mead.

Canada scored two points in the third and seventh ends with last-rock advantage and stole one in the tenth, while Germany couldn't muster a multi-point end when they had the hammer.

Kapp drew for a piece of the button surrounded by three Canadian stones in the fourth end to tie the game 2-2. The German skip faced four Canadian counters in the sixth and again drew in for one to make it 3-3.

"It's good to know we've got the game to hold off a hot skip and make some great shots ourselves," Stoughton said.

"Andy Kapp was a one-man wrecking crew. At times it felt like seven against one out there."

STOUGHTON THIRD JON MEAD ON GERMAN SKIP ANDY KAPP

Stoughton's front end of second Reid Carruthers and lead Steve Gould dominated German counterparts Andreas Lang and Holger Hoehe with shooting percentages about 20 per cent higher.

"I had to make some circus shots to keep us alive, but it was not enough to win this game," Kapp said. "We needed to make more shots to put pressure on them, but we were under pressure the whole game."

Kapp is appearing in his 13th world championship and has the most career wins at 66. He has yet to collect one here as his team dropped to 0-2.

Canada got a breather yesterday with just one game before splitting today's games between the morning and evening draws. Stoughton takes on Dong Keun Lee of South Korea (0-3) followed by Pete Fenson of the U.S. (1-1) at night. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hockey player dies of cancer

Saskatchewan hockey player Mandi Schwartz has lost her valiant battle with leukemia.

Thousands of people rallied to her side to help her in that battle, but the 23-year-old from Wilcox died yesterday after two years of fighting the disease, according to her high school Notre Dame College.

She went into a Regina hospital on Saturday night and died yesterday morning, said Notre Dame College president Rob Palmarin.

"We're all a bit taken aback and saddened because she's one of ours," Palmarin told The Canadian Press.

Schwartz played forward for the Yale Bulldogs and also attended Canadian women's team camps. Before heading to Yale, she played girls' hockey for the Notre Dame Hounds in Wilcox and graduated in 2006.

She was engaged to engineering student Kaylem Prefontaine of Rockglen, Sask., and they had planned a wedding for the summer of 2012.

Raptors end their losing skid

► DeRozan scores 24 points
► Bargnani, Calderon sit out game

DeMar DeRozan scored 24 points, Jerryd Bayless had 21 and the Toronto Raptors beat the Orlando Magic 102-98 yesterday to snap a six-game losing streak.

Leandro Barbosa added 14 points for the Raptors, who were without Andrea Bargnani and Jose Calderon. James Johnson and Sonny Weems each had 11, and Reggie Evans finished with 17 rebounds.

Dwight Howard had 31 points and nine rebounds and Jameer Nelson scored 21 points for the Magic, who have lost three of four. Brandon Bass and Jason Richardson each scored 13 points and Hedo Turkoglu had 11.

Toronto outscored Orlando 29-19 in the fourth quarter. Trailing by eight points, 81-73, after Turkoglu scored the opening basket of the fourth, Toronto answered with a 12-3 run to take an 85-84 lead with 8:56 remaining.

Nelson tied it at 90 on a running jumper with 5:22 left but DeRozan replied with a three-point play.

Howard made just one of four from the line after being fouled on consecutive possessions, allowing Toronto to maintain a 95-93 lead with 3:41 left.

For the fourth consecutive game, the Magic were limited to just nine healthy players. Guard Gilbert Arenas (illness) did not travel to Toronto while guard Chris Duhon missed his third straight game with a sore right thumb.

Bargnani sat for the third time in four games with a sore right ankle while Calderon missed his second straight game with an injured left hamstring.
